ARRESTED AFTER LONG WAIT

estroyed Trees on the Road Leadin to Forest Cemetery

After awaiting his appearance in Mic etown since Hallowe'en Jefferson Johnon, a colored waiter in Broad Street Sta tion, Philadelphia, but formerly a resident of this town, was arrested charged with palicious mischief, trespassing and carry ing concealed deadly weapons on the an rival of the 12.36 A. M. train Sunday morning by officer Thomas Boulder The officer identified Johnson while conversing with a friend from one of th car windows, and after considerable trouble succeeded in pulling his pris oner from the car. It is alleged that Johnson was one of party of colored men, who on last Halowe'en night destroyed twelve shade trees which had been planted by the citiens on the road leading to Forest Ceme tery. The people of Middletown were the vandals and offered a reward of $2 or their apprehension. Johnson upon being searched produce revolver and razor, and the addition charge of carrying a concealed deadly weapon was placed against him. John son was hailed before Magistrate Cox and held in bail for the grand jury.

NO PEACHES

A Delaware correspondent of a Phile lelphia paper sends a somewhat cheerful account of the harvesting of the Delawar peach crop. The yield is small he admits, but prices are high ranging over the dollar mark. But the people of the cities need not prepare to receive the lusciou Delaware peach, for this year it will not be in evidence. At this season usually the growers are in the midst of the har vest; but at stations where ordinarily from ten to fifteen cars are loaded in one day, not a full car is now loaded. At some of the places that are regarded as large shipping points there are days when not a basket arrives. In places where trees were shielded from the frosts there are a few for mar ket, but we predict that the total yield will not be two per cent. of the nor There are peaches in other States that Delaware farmer eats peaches this year he will have to buy them.

One Negro Killed and Several Others

Friendship Camp, near Clayton, was ng. One negro was killed instantly and are now lodged in Dover jail as disturbers and suspects of being murderers.

Sunday was expected to be a great day and consequently there was an interming ling of clans from Middletown, Seaford Millington and other places. They made an "all night" of it Saturday, and skirted around the camp grove were squads of "darks" playing crap by the dim flicker of candle lights. The most exciting game was going on at a spot near the juncture of the D. & C. Railroad and the road leading to "Middle Alley." About 4 o'clock Sunday morning a quarrel en sued which ended in a riot. George Jackson, of Middletown, was shot through the heart and killed instantly. John Pierce, of Middletown, was shot in the back and so badly injured that he was later hustled off to the Delaware Hospital, Wilmington, with the hope of saving his life. William Guy, of Middletown, wa shot in the neck and was badly wounded, and Lloyd Berry, of Mt. Pleasant, was shot in the legs. Smyrna and Clayton officers and phy-ned and were soon o the scene. Monday afternoon Sheriff Edward Baker and Deputy Sheriff John Foreaker took to Dover eight negroes and Thursday, after a visit with Mrs. H. B. and lodged them in jail. ... WON BY A TUNE "Good-bye, dearest! Good-bye!" For the twentieth time Mark Jermyn nttered the words of farewell, and for the twentieth time the girl responded, but realizing that the parting was not an ordinary one, they were loth to part even then. Years hence they might meet again; per-

The girl looked into the earnest face bending over her, into the depths of the grave, brown eyes. "I cannot," she said softly. "Moreover is it necessary? Is it what you would do were you in my place?"

Her logic was unanswerable and he "If you were the only child of some body next door to a millionaire," she went on, "and your father f roads you to marry any one who was not wealthy while you really loved one as poor as a church mouse, would you give up with-out a struggle? Of course you wouldn't, Mark. You'd wait, and wait, and

"Because, it's what you're most fitted for," Elsie Renton replied. "Mark dear, you're going to be a great man." He waivel away her words with a smile and another kiss. "You flatter me, sweetheart!" he said, "although it's true my father was far from name on marriage, and died when I was only five years old. But his existence really ended, so far as the world was concerned, when he forsook his old name, for he never composed a single thing the great Jermyn was at the instrument.

"How strange!" remarked the girl, wonderingly. "And what a terrible had never played before. The applause example to you, dearest."

'You may think so. Of course, I was too young to know much then, and never heard how it all happened, for my mother soon followed my father."

'And his name before was-"Wegar-Mark Wegar-one of the foremost composers of his time!"

A couple of years later Mark Jermyn was in London. It seemed much longer since he had parted from Elsie Renton in Paris, where they had been fellow students at the Conservatorie; she, for the sake of finishing a musical education, he, because he had his future living to con-

In Paris the girl had been free from the hidebound conventionalities of home, and her doting parents would doubtless have been horrified had they known she had dared to regard someone with affection. The two had parted; he to work for a name and she to enter society.

And now he was in London, his fame having preceded him, and Mark Jermyn, the celebrated pianist, was announced to make his debut before the most critical audience in the world. Success had not spoilt him, and he remained the same modest man that had held Elsie's hand in his two years since; deeply, madly, in love with her still. Several times she had written to him, and with her last letter in his pocket as a talisman, he faced the eager crowd that evening.

The performance was a success. Mark Jermyn's reputation was more than up-held and he quickly became the lion of the hour. Invitations from the highest of the land literally showered upon him, so numerous that they would have taken years to respond to all, one of the earliest coming from the Rentons offering a princely fee for a short recital at a forth-coming "At Home." To the Jermyn stiffly replied that he only accepted social engagements. An answer soon came altering the tone of the invitation, and a to meet his loved one once more.

The place was already thronged with guests when he arrived, but Elsie was the first to greet him, and as he took her hand he would have knelt down then and then and kissed it, for a single look served to tell him that he held her heart

"I'm hostess for the moment" observed. "Let me take you to mother. He followed her, and a little later wa being introduced to Mrs.-Renton.

"Mr. Jermyn, mother !" The stately lady addressed, looked up, and as she saw his handsome, clear cut features started. "Mr. Jermyn?-of yes, of course

Your appearance seems familiar. But then, aren't your photographs all over Mark bowed, but guessed by her tone that she had never seen his portrait.

He sauntered aimlessly about, convers ing first with one and another till at length he found himself addressing the host himself. And Jermyn was agree ably surprised; Elsie's father was no nearly as formidable as he had pictured him to be; on the contrary his attitude toward the young lion of the season was courtesy and geniality itself.

"Ah! my daughter tells me she me you in Paris," he remarked. "One of the first to discover your genius, I believe? Elsie's a dear girl, my dear sir!"

"She is!" assented Mark, earnestly.
"Always a dutiful girl, and a prize to be married shortly. My wife's a wonderful woman; she arranged it all?"

Mark's first impu se was to flee, but he resolved to learn the truth from Elsie's lips first. At last he caught her giances following her into a small ante room leading from one of the principal apartments. When the door closed, he took her hand, and looked into her eyes.

"And I insist on you marrying me!" he cried earnestly. "That is, if you are willing to become the wife of a entity?"

She looked up quickly. "Who is the nonentity?" she asked. "You, the clever artist or—with a gesture of disdain—"Lord Mapleson?"

"Then darling," he cried, if you But waiting doesn't always bring wealth," broke in Jermyn, "especially in the musical profession. Why did my father destine me for his own career?" he "No, indeed, Mark, no! I love you, oh! heaps more than I did two years ago, and that's something, isn't it?"

He admitted that it was, and kissed her, when some one calling Elsie, she had to leave. Mark strolled back to the drawing-room with a lighter heart. Some one was asking Mr. Renton whether Jermyn was to play; the host shrugged being a mediocrity. He changed his his shoulders, but the musician at onc interrupted with the remark he should only be too delighted.

A move was made to the piano, while He ran through several of his better know things in succession, playing as he at his conclusion, unlike most drawing-room applause, was for once sincere. Mr. Renton was profuse in his thanks and then his less genial wife inquired as a special favor, whether he would give them a novelty.

"A novelty?" repeated Mark anxiou to please his prospective parent. "Ah, yes! I had almost forgotten. To day's the wenty-second, isn't it? There is one thing I play once a year and always on the twenty-second of this month."

The last notes of the song were grad nally dying away, when all at once there was a tense scream from a distant corne All turned and saw that Mrs. Rento had fainted. A few days later Mark Jermyn called t nquire after Mrs. Renton, whom it was understood was seriously ill. The young fellow was at once shown into Mr. Renton's study, where the millionaire greeted him cordially. "My dear Mr. Jermyn," he said, "you're the very man I wish to see. You remember the effect your wonderful playing produced on my wife the other even-

"And I love her, too."

"Just so, just so! What I was going to say was this: my wife, it appears, was nce engaged to your father.' Mark Jermyn looked up in astonish

"Yes," continued Mr. Renton, "and from what I can hear-of course, this is in confidence between you and me, it broke Mark Wegar's heart. My wife jilted him for myself, and it seems that, out of pity, afterwards married a cousin whom he discovered had been in love with him for years. The air you played the other

Some one opened the door just then and Elsie Renton, seeing Mark, threw erself into his arms.

A NEW SWINDLE

Here is a new swindle that is being worked among the farmers and those wanting to dispose of real estate. A far-mer receives a letter asking him to list his farm for sale. According to the blanks furnished, the farmer asks the firm to try to sell his place, by advertis ing it for months, and agrees to pay the firm fifty cents an acre when they have her so soon—but there! the men, the "You mean some one will fall in love with her?" queried Jermyn anxiously. "Has fallen in love. Scores of them. By the way there she is with Lord Maple-son."

Mark Jermyn turned.

Imm fifty cents an acre when they have fulfilled their part of the agreement. On close examination, it is found that the firm agrees to do nothing but advertise the farm, and nothing is said as to how, what extent or where it will be advertised. Whenever the advertising is done the commission is American. has been found or not. Farmers wh have signed this kind of contract have been advised by their attorneys to settle
